

The Chaput Docs

How to Use

tl;dr: Open a spreadsheet and click on a link to open a file. DO NOT move the folders 1, 2, 3, or raw_text.

Chaput_Document_Archive.xlsx is sorted by word count. Rank #6, Steadman 1, appears to be "Walking on Air".

Feel free to copy any individual file.

The Chaput Docs — How to Use

This thumb drive contains four catalogs of the files found in the archive.

You do not need to understand the folders or files behind the catalogs. Start with the four Excel spreadsheets.

The four catalogs

1. Chaput Document Archive

This is the main catalog of Word documents, including the old .doc files.

It is sorted from largest document to smallest by word count.

Use this first if you are looking for:

- novels
- manuscripts
- stories
- chapters
- articles
- essays
- queries
- other writing

2. Chaput Other Documents

This contains other document-type files, including:

- PDF
- TXT

- RTF
- ODT
- PowerPoint
- HTML and similar files

It is organized by file type and then alphabetically.

3. Chaput Image Archive

This contains the photographs and other image files.

It is organized by image type and then alphabetically by filename.

4. Chaput Audio Archive

This contains audio files.

It is organized by the original folder/location and then by filename. This is intended to keep files that were originally stored together near each other.

Opening a file

The Filename and Location columns contain clickable links.

Click either one to open the original file.

3\Some Folder\Some Document.doc

The link will take you directly to that file.

Do not move the four spreadsheets away from the folders named 1, 2, 3. The links depend on those folders remaining next to the spreadsheets.

The raw_text folder also needs to remain next to the spreadsheets.

If a document won't open

Some of these files are very old. The archive contains files dating from older versions of Microsoft Word and other software.

1. Try opening it from the catalog again.
2. If necessary, try opening it with Microsoft Word.
3. If Word asks whether you want to convert the file, follow its instructions.

The archive has been preserved as found. Do not delete an old file simply because it looks unfamiliar or won't open immediately.

A useful place to start

If you are looking for writing that may be substantial, open Chaput Document Archive and start near the top.

The largest documents are listed first. Several documents are around 100,000 words or more, so these are likely to be particularly worth examining.

There are also many duplicate or near-duplicate versions of documents. This is intentional: the archive preserves the original files rather than trying to decide which version is the "correct" one.

Important

Please don't reorganize the folders 1, 2, 3, raw_text.

The spreadsheets contain links that depend on their current locations.

If you want to reorganize or rename things, make a copy first.
